

The “Me Tarzan, You Jane (or James and Jane's Friend Joan)” Sexual Adventure Spread

Party #1's “Attraction Profile”

Party #2's “Attraction Profile”

This is the “Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice” of tarot spreads, but created for couples instead of foursomes. The idea is to show congeniality at its most primal and private, devoid of social posturing and hormone-fueled bravura. It is gender-inclusive, offering a range of alternate scenarios (but no Tarzan and Cheeta unless you really must). This spread uses a separate deck for each line, and a third one for the “Grand Quintessence”. An additional deck will be needed if the “Sub-Quint” cards have already appeared in the draw. The first four cards in each row show how likely the participants are to be attracted to one another, and the two “Sub-Quints” derived from those four give a snapshot of their overall magnetism for comparison. In most cases, “friendly” cards bode well, but upbeat “Commitment” cards may be a show-stopper if one party has partnership aspirations more earnest than those of the other; in contrast, overly dour cards here may suggest off-putting desperation, so neutral cards are best. The “Grand Quint” card derived from the two sub-quints displays the level of mutual satisfaction that can be expected from the liaison. Reversals can be used to suggest reticence on either side.
